Older Youth Readiness: Shaping Pathways that Foster Supportive Relationships & Independence

Thursday, April 23 | 12–1:30 p.m. | Virtual

At the Institute for Child Welfare Innovation, a program of the Foster & Adoptive Care Coalition, we strive to provide professionals with resources and information relevant to your crucial work: serving youth impacted by foster care and their caregivers.

Join us for Collaborate & Connect: FREE, actionable information for child welfare professionals.

What We'll Discuss

Often, involvement in the foster care system results in the loss of critical connections to friends, family, kin, community, school, culture, and places of worship. This training features The Older Youth Readiness program (OYR) which is designed to support youth in navigating and accessing the services necessary to promote overall well-being. Youth play a central role in guiding the service planning process, helping to shape pathways that foster strong, supportive relationships with the ultimate goal of achieving interdependence.

What You'll Learn

- Comprehensive, strengths-based assessments centered on each youth's identity
- Impact involvement has on individualized case planning, promoting placement stability and long-term emotional & social well-being
- Culturally responsive & trauma informed services
